Because at ISHCMC we understand that mistakes are stepping stones to genuine learning.

Today's students need to do more than memorise information in traditional classrooms. They need a more evolved approach to education that allows them the freedom to pursue their passions fearlessly. In addition to a strong academic foundation, they need opportunities to be creative, innovative and analytical, all of which lie at the heart of the ISHCMC philosophy.

Come and see

Why we love mistakes

Nathan, Grade 1
ISHCMC student since 2009.

No, not all of our graduates go on to Oxford.

Some choose universities like
Stanford, Cornell, Penn, LSE, Imperial, Durham, UofT, Melbourne, HKU, Yale-NUS, Yonsei etc.

BIS Graduates have gone to 265 universities worldwide.
Though Oxford is still an excellent choice as well.

Where is your child going?

Designing Woman

IN MY ALTERNATE life, I think I would've been a designer. Growing up, my mom found ways of working from home to be able to look after my siblings and me. One of those jobs entailed bringing home huge bags of ribbons, bows and clips from a shop in Chinatown. Working from a finished sample, she'd fastidiously recreate these fanciful accessories earning just a quarter each. Of course, with an army of (not so) willing helpers at her disposal, all of us were engaged in this little home factory in the evenings after our homework was done. Looking back, I think this is probably where I caught the design bug to fiddle with accessories, my current obsession being about 100 pairs (and growing!) of earrings in my dresser which I love taking apart and creating new ones from all the pieces. This month, we feature some of Saigon's incredibly talented designers, putting their unique spin on everything from jewelry to hats to shoes to apps. It's wonderful to know that such a creative spirit resides here, along with the craftsmanship needed to bring these designs from concept to reality.

This month's Saigon Mythbusters brings up a question that I've asked myself lots of times. Is it legal for shops to price items in US dollars or should everything be displayed in Vietnamese dong? It's something I encounter almost every day here and I have to admit, I'll often gauge a business' integrity on whether they price their items in dollars or dong.

Something else that brings up memories of my past is the Curious for Curios article on Saigon's most authentic antique market in untouristy Binh Thanh District. All throughout my teenage years, our family would set up our stall at a Sunday flea market in Manhattan. Rain, snow or sun, we would be there from 8am to 8pm selling, buying and trading anything and everything from electronics and antiques to clothes and even stuff from Vietnam. I can't wait to head out to the Saigon Ve Chai market with my dad to relive some old memories!

In My Body, Her Baby, NPD Khanh recounts a truly moving story of a woman so desperate for money that she rented out her womb, timely considering a new law soon to legalize surrogacy in Vietnam. In a country where everyone's first question is invariably whether you have a family yet, admitting you're childless can be shameful, opening the door to what some might consider extreme measures to save face.

On a happier note, photographer Piers Birtwistle takes us on a scenic journey to the wilds of Mongolia. Seeing the images brought me back to when I visited several years ago. What struck me most were the wide open empty spaces — no high rises, people or construction. Just sky as far as the eye could see. Later in the trip, I found myself standing in front of the newly built, shiny metal monument of Genghis Khan. The enormity of the statue was overwhelming and definitely made me feel conquered — a fitting tribute to arguably the greatest conqueror in history.

And finally, Saigon's reputation as a foodie's heaven won't disappoint when you read this month's review of two new additions to the culinary scene — Italian import La Bettola and Japanese whiskey bar and grill Monde restaurant.

Even though we're in the midst of the rainy season, that's no excuse to sit at home and mope. So get out there, explore the city and be creative! ■ of Vietnamese children are stunted. While the proportion of underweight malnutrition decreased steadily over the years, the number of children who do not reach the standard height is still high, the National Institute of Nutrition has announced. Children who are underweight for their age were only about 15 percent; the children who were shorter than standard height were nearly 26 percent. Kon Tum province has the highest indexes in the country, especially the rate of stunted children up to nearly 41 percent. Stunting malnutrition is also known as chronic malnutrition and it causes major implications for physical stature, endurance and mental development of children in the future, even lasts for generations. Stunted mothers can have malnourished and stunted babies.

BIS HELMETS FOR KIDS CAMPAIGN

With more than 37 million motorcycles registered in Vietnam, knowing how to properly wear a helmet has become a crucial matter and the Year 9 students of the British International School are helping to raise awareness. As part of the ongoing Helmets For Kids campaign, in May the Year 4 students of the Truong Huynh Van Ngoi local school were invited to BIS for an array of educational activities, all with the aim of teaching and encouraging road safety.

Throughout the event, students and teachers from the local school were interviewed about the event as well as their own awareness of helmet and road safety. Surprisingly, the number of responses to “Do you know how to wear a helmet?” was far from positive when students from the local school were asked. Although they all confidently stated the first part correctly, most of them forgot to fasten their chin strap. Readers, “Do you actually know how to properly wear a helmet?” If you don’t, follow these instructions: 1) The helmet has to be put on the same level front to back, side to side. 2) The side straps should be positioned right below your earlobe. 3) The chin strap should be fastened leaving the space for no more than one finger.

The simple message of “Wear Your Helmets” should be embedded not only into the minds of the students in Huynh Van Ngoi local school, but to every child in Vietnam that uses a motorbike without a helmet. By increasing awareness among the children themselves, the fearsome statistic of “over 9,000 motorcycle fatalities in Vietnam each year, 90 percent [of which] involve children” would inevitably falter.

THE MYTH:

Is it true it's illegal for shops to price items in US dollars and everything must be displayed in Vietnamese dong?

YES, IT IS true. Regulation #552/1999/TB-NHNN7, which directly limits the use of dollars and other foreign currencies, has been in place for nearly two decades. Regulation #552 is a nationwide legal announcement, clarifying earlier regulations that issued a blanket ban on pricing items, services and products in any other currency other than dong. However, it was ineffective because there were no penalties in place for violators.

Only in 2011 when reports of frauds on foreign travelers and businessmen reached critical levels did the Vietnamese government issue a legal text (Regulation # 95/2011/ND-CP) officially affixing a range of financial penalties with a maximum fine of VND500 million and confiscation of business licenses. Because of the high risk, Regulation #95 succeeded in curtailing 90 percent of the illegal practice but even this new regulation couldn't stamp out the dollar pricing phenomenon since, according to the fine print of the legal text, investigation and punishment can only be carried out by investigators from the Central Bank, not the normal police force, thus limiting the actual scope of enforcement.

In mid 2012, a direct hotline to the Central Bank investigators' office was created for customers to report violations, but a year later it was quietly taken down with no reason given.

THE MYTH:

I just bought a new phone and when I told my office workers they said I need to take them out for lunch to 'wash' the phone or I'll get bad luck? Is it true there's a Vietnamese custom of 'washing' a new purchase?

IMAGE BY ADAM ROBERT YOUNG

YES, THEY ARE messing with you; but not in the way you think. The word 'wash' here is a literal translation from Vietnamese slang to English that didn't quite get the folk culture subtext across. The Vietnamese word is 'rua' and while it does indeed translate to wash, in this case it refers to a Vietnamese folk custom in which anyone who has recently acquired a new item of some value (an expensive phone, a motorbike, a house, etc...) proceeds to have a small celebration with coworkers, close friends or family members to 'wash' the new item in good luck and to ward off ill wishes of envious people who may be jealous of their wealth.

The custom has roots in ancient rural Vietnam when farmers would, literally, wash a newly acquired ox or sow - the animal represented a new source of income. Since there is no written record of it, no one actually knows when exactly it began.

Now, the custom has taken on a slightly teasing tone, especially between close friends and coworkers. The request from your colleagues in this case is out of jest that indirectly implies they may wish ill on you (in the same way people threaten each other with pranks) if you don't let them share in the 'good luck' of a new phone. It is not in any way serious though, so if you do not want to spend that extra money to humor them, simply reply half-jokingly, "Because I bought this phone, I am now broke and will have to eat instant noodles from now till the end of the month." - NPD Khanh ■

My Body, Her Baby

A controversial new law on surrogacy has just been passed in Vietnam

TEXT BY NPD KHANH IMAGE BY NGOC TRAN

THU THUY (not her real name) is 29 this year, and is now six months into her second pregnancy. You might not think there's anything unusual about that – except that once again, this is not her baby.

Thuy is a surrogate mother. The first time was a decade ago, when an infertile couple paid her a small fortune by Vietnamese standards to bear a child they couldn't conceive on their own. Back then, it was an illegal, even shameful, thing to do. This time, it remains illegal – but lawmakers have now accepted the legitimacy of surrogacy, and from January 1 next year, it will have legal recognition. Legalization will be welcomed by the estimated 7.7 percent (7 million) of people in Vietnam struck by infertility, (according to a 2012 report by the Ministry of Health and Welfare). To put that in context, the World Health Organization classifies any percentage over three as critical – a red zone area that functions as an alarm bell.

The first time Thuy carried a child for another woman was purely for money. "I was a college student then, alone in the big city. My family is based in Tien methods was pregnant with the couple’s baby within a few months. To clarify what the ‘traditional’ method means in Vietnam, Thuy had sex with the husband while the wife sat outside the room until she became pregnant. Back then, Vietnam didn’t have in vitro fertilization technology.

“It was a typical deal. We pay you VND80 million for the completed birth, a monthly stipend and a budget for medical care,” explains Thuy. “I had a personal doctor who saw to it that I took care of myself and stayed within the agreed rules of the contract. There is also hazard pay. The deal cuts off once I deliver. I am not to associate myself with either the child or the parents once the birth and the adoption papers are completed. I can’t know the name of the child or ever seek to meet her in the future. It’s not mine. I sold it. The contract is all very clear on that point.”

For the first five months, things went well. But soon, trouble arose. “One day, the doctor called me in and told me I have a genetic predisposition for hepatitis,” she says. “Whether the baby inherits it or not, it’s all a big question. When the parents discovered this, they didn’t want it anymore. They called me and told me to get rid of it. I said no. I was in deep shock. I was living alone then in an apartment they rented for me. Of course I couldn’t tell any of my friends or my family what I was doing. They were very insistent. They said that if I did not get rid of the baby, they would stop paying the monthly stipend, the rent, and the completion fee, and I could do whatever I wanted with the child.”

“I cried a lot that week. I felt cornered and punished. I thought perhaps my ancestors were punishing me for doing something so vile as selling my own child. I could not go home and I did not want to get rid of the child. I had been harboring her for months in my belly. She kicked whenever I lay on my side. I was only starting to understand what it meant to be a mother. I thought at the time how could I be so stupid, to only think of it as nine months of my life in exchange for the money.”

After two weeks, Thuy made her choice. She was keeping the baby. “I just thought I couldn’t do it. I couldn’t kill this child. It was my decision to become a surrogate mother. Nobody forced me. I thought if I were a big enough girl to put myself in this position then I was big enough to bear the consequences of my own actions. I cut myself off from the parents, moved out of the apartment, and went back to my dorm room. With how I looked at the time, people started to talk – but I bore it because I’d put myself there. I got in contact with my family. They were happy to hear from me. I’d been absent for months and they worried that something might have happened.”

A Shame to Bear

Since then, nine years has passed and in vitro fertilization has become available in Vietnam. Thuy is now on her second surrogate pregnancy, but this time her decision is one made out of kinship instead of desperation. The soon-to-be parents are Thuy’s sister and brother-in-law. She was impregnated using the couple’s egg and sperm.

“The gods have a sense of humor,” she laughs. “When I thought I’d learned my lesson, they came back with more. I understand the agony of being infertile. Regardless of what they did to me, that first couple, I understand their pain, now more than I did then. For Vietnamese women, either you’re a mother or you’re nothing. For the men, it’s not so easy either. I’ve heard of those who leave their hometown once people know they’re infertile because they can’t bear the shame.”

Reactions to the news of the legal change to surrogacy have been slow, with mixed expressions of concern, wariness, approval and disapproval. Despite her experience, Thuy approves.

“People are worried that this could open the gate for abuse and reckless commercialization. I can tell you right now that that has already happened. Banning something is not the same as making it disappear. It doesn’t fix the problem. As long as there’s a need, there will be a supply regardless of whether it’s legal or not. I’m an example. My daughter is the product. But I’ve chosen to look past that. The people who wrote the new law are very clear on the goal and the intention of surrogacy – to help those escape the agony of barrenness. In the end, how you choose to view surrogacy is a personal choice, and while I know from my experience that it can be an ugly, heartless thing, this time around, I choose to see it as giving the gift of life.” ■

Giang. They’re not rich. I needed to finish school or it was back to an uneducated life of poverty for me. I was desperate and stupid. I needed money. I needed a lot of it and I needed it quick. Few jobs in the world pay as well.

“I was very naive the first time,” she continues. “I was 19 and didn’t think much about what it meant. I’m in good health. I don’t have any disease. It’s nine months of my life in exchange for the ability to finish college and start my career with a hefty nest egg. I didn’t want to know the details. I told myself I could do this, I could do this. It was for my future.”

According to Thuy, becoming a surrogate wasn’t difficult, even though it was illegal at the time, because of the high demand. Through an underground broker, she was matched with an infertile couple, negotiated a deal and through ‘traditional’

You Raise Me Up

One man's vision to provide an international school experience at local rates

TEXT BY JAMES PHAM IMAGES BY NGOC TRAN

IN BETWEEN A course of king crab tartar with a swirl of mango jelly topped with a gold leaf, a handsomely dressed couple eyes a Hoa Vu painting, heads together, quietly formulating a bidding strategy. The large painting depicting a peaceful river scene is now at USD4,000 and climbing. By the time the poached oeufs en meurette in a red wine sauce come out, the couple has secured the artwork for a cool USD6,000. "We don't even have anywhere to put it," they laugh. "But the kids don't like one of the paintings we have, so we'll swap that one out, I guess."

The privileged of Saigon have turned out to the Chance Foundation's Annual Charity Gala to support the city's underprivileged children through an education initiative, the vision of Viet Kieu Jonathan Dinh. Eyes follow this stocky, straight-talking man as he works his way around the ballroom. Born in Vietnam and part of the wave of boat people, Jonathan with his mother and uncle ended up being sponsored by a group of families in Massachusetts (USA) who helped with housing and education. "If that hadn't happened, I don't know where I'd be right now. What would've happened if no one had sponsored me? I'd probably be in construction with about four kids by now. [Since then], I've been lucky enough in life to make my own way, but it's been a long journey."

Retired comfortably at 30 from the sale of a telecom company, Jonathan returned to Vietnam with the idea of starting up an education company "and making craploads of money". However, a stint of teaching left him disenchanted. "The more I got into education, the more pissed off I was that these backpackers come here, speak English, have a one month certificate, and end up making two grand a month, easy." His conclusion was, "I don't need to open another business. I'm fine. But these kids aren't. They're stuck in a perpetual cycle of the same curriculum, going to school 12 hours a day and not learning anything and not knowing anything when they graduate."

Back at the charity gala, the next item up for bid is a set of Amazing Spiderman comic books drawn by Todd McFarlane. Bidding is slow, so Jonathan takes the mic and tells the story of how he camped in line for two days as a 14-year-old to buy the set. "People can take away your freedom. They can take away your food. But the one thing they can't take away is your knowledge," he reminds the crowd. "That's why we're all here tonight.” Bidding starts up again in fervor and the comics end up selling for USD1,800.

After the last macaroon has been eaten and the last glass of paired wine has been drunk, the event is declared a success. The money raised tonight will go to support Jonathan’s dream of providing low-cost, high-quality education to Vietnamese youths in the form of a pair of IEG (www.ieg.edu.vn) English schools located in District 10.

Salt of the Earth

“Everyone educated knows that education is the only way to increase a person’s worth and a country’s value. I can come back and buy rice all day long but where is that going to lead? People see [that Vietnam has] a high literacy rate, but the truth is people can’t get educated. Or only to a glass ceiling. These people are the salt of the earth. They’re never going to leave here. What are they going to do for the rest of their lives?”

IEG has two campuses, just around the corner from each other, one for adults and one for kids. “For adults, it’s almost too late for them,” says Jonathan. “For kids, though, it’s not too late. I wanted to create a curriculum like I had being raised in the US. So here, we tell parents that we don’t just teach English, we teach the confidence to use English.”

With that mission statement, Jonathan has set out to create an international school experience at local prices. “We’re one of only two schools in Vietnam to use projectors and multimedia in every classroom,” he says with pride. The school also limits class sizes to 12 students, has 100 percent foreign teachers with Vietnamese teaching assistants and takes kids on regular field trips to places like KizCity, Dam Sen Park and Fly Cupcake, encouraging them to interact in English. Every other Sunday, Disney Days and arts and crafts sessions are held. On certain nights, one of the classrooms becomes a movie room complete with popcorn and the latest flicks, all without subtitles. “I want to provide that experience that you or I had when our parents took us to a movie,” says Jonathan. With the help of the Chance Foundation, the school has been able to drop tuition to VND 4.2m for almost five months of weekend classes, affording some of the city’s youths an educational experience ordinarily out of reach. “We might not be very pretty but we like to think of ourselves as the Nordstrom of the educational world,” he adds, referencing the upscale American department store known for its attention to customer service.

The school, which hopes to be self-sustaining by the end of the summer, is still a work in progress. In its first year, “I lost more money than you make,” says Jonathan candidly. And this is after another school project fell through, being co-opted by a local business partner. “I got swindled,” says Jonathan. “I didn’t know the ins and outs of the laws and they just took it all over. But being struck once didn’t deter me. It happened, and that’s fine. But I was determined to do this again.”

In a sea of for-profit language schools, finding support for a quality program charging local prices has been a struggle. “The thing is, unless a website shows children dying, bleeding or with their arms cut off, people don’t want to give money to education. But education is the key. Look at India. How did they raise themselves from zero to hero? By putting all their money into universities. Education. Education. Education. For us, the end result isn’t to send people abroad or to make them rich. It’s to better their lives or at least give them an opportunity to do so.”

Back in the “Denver” classroom, the projector is being used for karaoke. The school’s longest-running class is singing Josh Groban. “You raise me up, to walk on stormy seas; I am strong, when I am on your shoulders; You raise me up... To more than I can be,” the children trill as Jonathan watches on proudly. “What man is a man who doesn’t try to make the world better?” he asks quietly. ■

A truly unique vintage shopping experience

TEXT BY NPD KAHNH IMAGES BY NGOC TRAN

ASK MOST RESIDENTS in Saigon where to buy antiques and they'll likely direct you to Le Cong Kieu Street, popularly known as "Antique Street," in District 1. However, that would be leading you in the wrong direction as the majority of objects for sale in this short patch of road near Ben Thanh Market are not real antiques. Even the sellers who make their living on Le Cong Kieu openly admit that more than 70 percent of their merchandise are factory-produced duplicates and that the once honest antique street is now more a tourist trap than a place to buy a piece of history.

For bargains, design classics and retro kitsch, the best hunting grounds are actually at Cao Minh Café at 311/27 No Trang Long, Binh Thanh. Every Sunday morning an antique fair called Saigon Ve Chai (Saigon Junk) is held there and, according to founder Tran Khac Dung, it is the only place in Saigon that guarantees the sale and exhibition of authentic vintage items

"Antique really is a weighty word," says Dung. "I feel it has become something of a gimmick, a sure-fire way to wow and grab attention. I do not like to use it, rather I would call what we have here 'collector's items.'" He points to a 200-year-old handcrafted French clock, a pre-World War 1 Bauser nautical compass, a Royal brand American oil lamp and a 1961 Mercedes once owned by infamous Vietnamese double agent Pham Ngoc Thao.

"Most people, if they are not consummate collectors, would find it difficult to understand how we place a value on an item," he continues. "How do you place value on something that to other people may be junk? There are many elements that decide the value of an item but the most important are: age, quantity (how many still exist) and history (its story and previous owners). If the owner does not understand the story, the historical worth of an item, he or she

"How long have you been collecting items?"
 "A lifetime." (Tran Khac Dung, the founder of the fair)

"These right beside me used to belong to Vietnamese soldiers 60, 70 years ago. You want to hear a war story, come to me."

"This did not come from my grandmother's attic. I do sometimes brew tea with it though. Tastes great!"

will see it as just junk. Knowledge is the key. To collect is to understand the worth of an item, not to show off."

Saigon Ve Chai (www.saigonvechai.com) first started in 2008 as an online website and forum but the group's popularity and increasing offline community prompted the creation of the weekend market held at Cao Minh Cafe owned by Vietnamese artist and singer Tran Cao Minh. There is no entry fee other than a mandatory purchase of a drink for VND30,000. The fair essentially acts as a consignment center for sellers who don't have a place to showcase their items.

"During the week, this is a quiet, empty place. But on Sunday morning, it's packed with about 200 people," says Dung. "We thought about getting a bigger place, but that means more people, more sellers, and more factors to control and check the quality of. So there is no rush since we cannot make sure that we can control the increased volume." In a market where frauds, fakes, and overcharging are the norms, this principle is the reason Saigon Ve Chai has been successful.

Knowledge and information is shared freely at the fair and newcomers are encouraged to ask questions or seek advice from experts. "Our one cardinal rule is trust. This is not a shop. We do not make money from all these sales. This is a community and to break the trust of one person means breaking the trust of an entire community." ■

If you've been to any of the country's wet markets you would have seen (and smelled) them - dried and flattened whole fish that could pass for cardboard cutouts, slabs of salted fish fillets so hard and stiff they could be used as a weapon. This month we traveled to the seaside town of Vung Tau to photograph every stage of the process, from capture, to handling and processing, and eventually for sale to consumers. ■

Combining passion, design knowledge and practical construction skills, each of our featured designers have one thing in common — they live to create. From elaborate over-the-top headpieces to a heart-shaped brooch that uses Mercedes Benz S-Class color coating technology, these creations are meant to inspire.

THE MAD HATTER

THE MANY HATS OF A DESIGNER

TEXT BY NPD KHANH

"I'VE BEEN CALLED crazy both behind my back and right to my face more times than I can remember. I got so used to it that it has since lost its barbs. One of these days I'm going to take it as a compliment, a term of endearment even," the eccentric milliner tells me over coffee.

In the local and international fashion industry he's known as "Kan Kanemura," to his Vietnamese friends he's "Kamasutra" (because they can't pronounce all the Ks, Ns and A's in his name) and to the rest of Saigon he's "that crazy hat guy." But regardless of what name you know him by, the consensus is that Kan is the foremost hat designer in Vietnam. His headpieces have adorned the heads of models on runways from downtown Saigon to Hong Kong and Sydney.

Born in the early 1980s to a family of traditional embroiderers, Kan's affair with the visual arts grew from a childhood of helping out his mother with her work. His first foray into fashion was winning first place in a design competition held by Muc Tim, a Vietnamese teen magazine, at 16 years old. IT college soon followed and while this educational choice may appear out of place, it eventually became the gateway to learning the basics of fashion, visual arts, and digital graphics for Kan.

"Most people forget that back then there was nothing like a fashion school. What I wanted to learn, nobody was teaching," he explains. "The internet was - and is - an endless source of such information. It was my only source then too. Back then internet was a new thing in Vietnam and cost VND20,000 an hour on a dial-up connection. I sat there every day.

"In a way I was lucky. I came into the fashion world in the same generation as other first generation Vietnamese designers like Minh Hanh and Dieu Anh who are now famous designers in Vietnam. The Vietnamese fashion world may be a lot bigger now, but it's been tamed, commercialized. People prefer safety now. In those first years, fashion was madness, recklessness, spontaneity and a crazy chase after one's personal sense of aesthetic. Because we were the first, there were no rules, no precedents to limit us."

Without such limits, Kan was able to perfect his skills through the process of trial and error. "I took up a lot of jobs: photographer, makeup artist, stylist, creative director and art director. To bring a single design of mine to life utilizes all the skills I learned in my other jobs. The eye of the photographer, the coordination and management skill of a director, the hands of an embroiderer. In a way, I feel like I came full circle to my embroiderer's son background."

COMPETING WITH HELMETS

During his many photo shoots and runway jobs, Kan would create his own accessories to adorn the clothes and models sent to him. "I always felt that the clothes alone were not enough. Too simple. I like richness, layers and depth. Nobody was protesting the end result." For simple pieces, he says, it may take anywhere from four to five full days to complete. For more complicated pieces, where cost isn't an issue, it may take a month for the individual parts to come together and hold shape.

"To wear a hat is to enter a three dimensional game," he claims. "A hat, or headpiece, sits on top of your head, a globe shape. It has to be able to sit on that round surface without slipping off and then maintain its shape without the frame of the wearer's body underneath, like a sculpture."

Each and every one of Kan's creations is unique - a one-off, created from various materials from basic fabric, thread, yarn and lace to heavier industrial components such as plastic, rubber and metal. Not one of them is similar to another.

The past two years mark important milestones for the Vietnamese hat designer in different ways. In 2013 he officially launched his designs publicly - they were previously only available to a select few - and this year will see him commercially enter the mass market. Kan wants to bring his hats to the urban Vietnamese culture. His debut consumer collection is scheduled to go on shelves July 2014. A risky move considering most of his targeted customers wouldn't leave their house without a helmet.

"So far I've stayed in the safe zone, with the people whose ideas of beauty correlate with mine and who can appreciate my work. But, I feel it is now time. I don't think the ordinary Vietnamese will think of my designs as 'crazy' forever. People's tastes have evolved, matured. So have their desire for an expression of their personality."

A SECOND CAREER FOR THE MOST UNLIKELY OF SHOE GURUS

TEXT BY JAMES PHAM    IMAGES BY NGOC TRAN

CLINTON KELLY, American fashion consultant and media personality, once said: "Sometimes comfort doesn't matter. When a shoe is freakin' fabulous, it may be worth a subsequent day of misery. Soak in Epsom salts and take comfort in the fact that you're better than everyone else."

"Comfortable is basically a euphemism for ugly," agrees UK banker turned shoe designer Dominic Price and the creative force behind Dominique Saint Paul (www.dominiquesaintpaul.com). "But I don't believe at all in enduring pain in pursuit of having beautiful shoes. They should be comfortable without looking comfortable." Surrounded by some of the most exquisitely crafted brogues, loafers and monks, today Dominic is clad in a simple tan suede driving shoe, in sharp contrast to some of the unexpectedly colorful, whimsically embellished luxe shoes in his District 1 shop. An amalgam of the unisex, francophone version of his first name and the Saigon clinic where he was born (now the Eye Hospital on Dien Bien Phu Street), Dominique Saint Paul is what this self-described "Imelda Marcos" facetiously calls the result of a mid-life crisis.

Born in Saigon and raised in India in his early years, Dominic has been obsessed with custom shoes for as long as he can remember. "My mother was an invalid with polio so she always had to have shoes made for her. Even as a child growing up in India in the 60s, you didn't go to a shop to buy shoes or shirts; you tended to have them made for you. That's how the world was. It was very natural to choose fabric to make a shirt, or leather to make shoes. Later, when I started to work in London, I remember walking by the best shoe houses and looking enviously at these phenomenal shoes which were too expensive for most people to afford, and certainly for me. It became my passion to design shoes and make very high quality shoes for myself."

As a 25-year-old, Dominic took his shoe designs to a shoe fair in London in search of a manufacturer. "I found one which took an initial order of 48 pairs which was all I could afford to fund," recalls Dominic, with dreams of creating a winning shoe that would move him up the design ladder. "I spent weekends at the factory in Northampton, learning everything I could about the manufacturing of shoes, much to the curiosity of some of the workers there." But the budding shoe designer's dream had to wait. The manufacturer bumped his order to the next year. "As a consequence, I was disenchanted by how tough it was for a young designer to get a leg up. There was nothing I could do, so I took a job offer trading bonds in an investment bank," following in his father's banking steps. "I thought I would go and work and save up enough money to be able to do this at some future time. I then got married, had children and made a career out of finance."

Indeed, an internet search for Dominic Price leads not to articles on tassels and soles, but to a successful financial career as

Managing Director for India and Sri Lanka at JP Morgan Chase Bank and as CEO of JP Morgan Vietnam.

A SHOE IN

When in Vietnam, Dominic by chance read about an elderly cobbler in District 3 and subsequent visits, old designs in hand, revived his passion for shoes which in turn rekindled his passion for shoe design, a passion dormant for nearly 30 years. While celebrating his 50th birthday he had an epiphany. "I said to my wife that I had always been passionate about making shoes, but never pursued it and I wasn't going to get to 60 without trying to do so. So I guess [shoe designer] is my alter ego," he laughs. "Or you could say banker is my alter ego. Many people go through life not knowing what they want to do. The travesty is in knowing but not being able to do it."

At Dominique Saint Paul, customers first try on a fitting pair to make sure the shop can fashion a shoe for them. "Then the fun begins," says Dominic of the myriad customizations available. While the shop doesn't make bespoke shoes per se, they can customize any one of their 13 different but traditional styles of shoes, including color and patternization, using a combination of materials like leather and suede, in essence creating a 'one of a kind' shoe.

"This allows for a great deal of latitude. Like buying a Rolls Royce, you can choose the extras that you want but you can't redesign the car. I'm a great believer in style being people expressing their own personality, on purpose. A lot of people would love to wear something a little bit different, but they don't have the courage of convictions or it's astronomically expensive. This is an opportunity to express themselves through what they wear, and to have a pair of high quality, very comfortable shoes."

While the lasts around which the shoes are formed come from London and the crust (unfinished) leather is imported from Florence, the construction and finishing of these shoes is strictly done in Vietnam using traditional European methods. Some even feature a Vietnamese twist, like a Dong Son star motif, either in the broguing or as a mother of pearl inlay, or an actual pearl embedded in the lantern-like tassels. "We're not trying to overdo it, but we wanted something to distinguish these shoes as Vietnamese. You know, Vietnam is a huge producer of shoes, but they tend to be mass market instead of high-end. I've talked to luxury shops in Singapore who say 'We'll carry your shoes if you say they're not made in Vietnam.' But we're proud of that fact; we don't want to hide it. Saigon and Shanghai are incredibly stylish cities in Asia, crucibles of creativity. There are a lot of creative people here, but it's frustrating that a lot of high quality creativity just gets exported rather than being sold here. The stereotype is that lacquer and crafts are what there is to buy, but there are so many other things made here at a very high standard. Even the Vietnamese are surprised by the fact that [other Vietnamese] can turn out such a fantastic product. Sometimes it's the foreigners who believe more in the Vietnamese capacity than many Vietnamese do."

A YOUNG LOCAL APP DEVELOPER HOPES TO MATCH THE SUCCESS OF FLAPPY BIRD

TEXT BY NPD KHANH

IMAGES BY ADAM ROBERT YOUNG

IN THE AFTERMATH of Flappy Bird's soaring success and sudden cancellation, Vietnamese youths with technical nouse have awoken to the potential of the mobile application industry. And despite the criticisms the creator received from fans and the media, Dong Nguyen succeeded in doing what countless other Vietnamese mobile game makers failed to do – prove it's possible for a Vietnamese independent developer to achieve financial success.

With his first app, WiFi Chua (WiFi "Freebie"), uploaded onto Apple's App Store and Android Google Play on February 26 of this year, two weeks after Flappy Bird was deleted, Nguyen Luong Bang hopes to be Dong Nguyen's successor. Within four months of its launch, WiFi Chua garnered a respectable 500,000 downloads, an active 3,000 log-ins daily and was crowned among the top 10 Vietnamese Apps in March and April 2014. It has started making money from in-app ads and the subsequent pro version (which costs USD1.99). While Bang is tight-lipped about how much he's making with his first digital creation, he hints it's enough for him to be serious about developing apps full time.

Born in 1992, 22-year-old Bang is still a year away from graduating university and has been working in app design and development for only six months. His first foray into design was in 2012 with Aprottrain Redteam, a student research and development group created by a professor at his university.

"Our first and only assignment was a social network site. It won first place in an FPT software developing competition but died in the real market due to a lack of funds and our own lack of knowledge on how the real market works," says Bang. "We were all coders in that group. I was the designated designer. I had bits and pieces of experience in designing before that. I eventually learned on the job. I knew then that I chose the wrong major."

With its breakneck development speed and competitive environment, the young naturally dominate IT and its associated industries. Success stories like Facebook and Flappy Bird are not the norm. "All of the Vietnamese success stories I have heard thus far are from older bros who have graduated and have had some years under their belt," he says. "It's difficult to find others my age."

CODERS AND DESIGNERS

WiFi Chua came from the backlash of overpriced 3G services in late 2013. "People started sharing WiFi passwords online through forums and group chats. Eventually someone had the idea of creating a website dedicated to sharing public WiFi passwords." The site is still up at sharepasswifi.com. Its latest post was about six weeks ago.

"When I saw that, immediately I thought, 'What a bright idea!' Put all the passwords up there on a website. It's like saying here's your key to free WiFi but you have to have WiFi in the first place to even see the key. What was he smoking when he thought of that? That's how WiFi Chua was born."

Bang's app was neither the first nor the only app to revolve around the same password-sharing model. "A couple days before I uploaded WiFi Chua, another guy uploaded a similar app." Yet it is Bang's rendition of the same concept that won at the end of the day.

According to him, the difference that marks success and failure for an app boils down to a single thing – design. "There are a lot of coders in Vietnam, but not that many designers." And the difference between a coder and a designer? Intent.

"Coders and designers both work in developing apps. In a team, these two guys have different jobs to do. But if one works solo, there's not a lot to distinguish which is which. The only thing that separates a designer and a coder then is intent. A lot of the time, coders just want to show off their mad coding chops. Vietnamese coders are generally young guys. It's easy to fall into that trap, especially when it's so easy to just whip up an app and upload it on one of the many app platforms.

"A year's worth of uploading rights costs only USD99 on the App Store. It's not a high price to pay for the ego," he explains. "What they forget is that the average users aren't likely to be able to appreciate their detailed coding work or the scope of their construct. All that work the coder puts in simply complicates the apps and distracts from the purpose of what he first sets out to do. A designer on the other hand must think from the user's point of view and create an app that answers the need of the users and exactly that only. A designer understands that it's not about him, it's about the users and what they want."

"I checked out the other rival app,"

Bang confesses. "There was no point in accusing each other of plagiarism because the concept is already so utilitarian that there's just no point to it. Execution is the only thing that sets them apart and I wanted to see his work. His [rival's] big layout meant that it was more complicated to navigate. The many information inputs he required from the users meant it took longer for the users to get the WiFi password or even to share the pass that they know."

WiFi Chua, on the other hand, is simpler and required only one user input – the WiFi pass. The app was completed within five days, from concept to upload. After his first success, Bang has since then published another application, a game that took him a couple of hours to complete. "It's a simple thing that does what it's supposed to do." The app, named Freaking Math, has since received roughly the same quantity of downloads as its sibling and similarly positive reviews.

Talking of future plans, the young designer says he has nothing concrete yet. "I want to graduate university first. Full timing as a serious app designer is the direction, but there are many things one can do with apps these days. Keep going solo for a while and learn. Form a group as many others did. Or join a pro corporation and learn from more experienced folks. Maybe eventually open up one myself. But that's so far off."

MEET VIVEK CHAUDHARY, A JEWELER WHO TURNS ACCESSORIES INTO PIECES OF ART

TEXT BY JAMES PHAM IMAGE BY ADAM ROBERT YOUNG

INSPIRATION. IT'S THE difference between a Chanel 2.55 bag that retails for thousands of dollars and a similar-looking knockoff sold for a fraction of that on the sidewalks of New York or an outdoor market in Hong Kong. For Coco Chanel, it was the iconic quilting inspired by the puffy jackets worn by horse breeders, and the threaded leather chains reminiscent of ropes anchoring a yacht, that has made her bag one of the most coveted for more than half a century. In the art world, more so than the construction or even the materials, the inspiration and the personality behind a piece is what determines its value. It's the reason collectors the world over clamor for the latest designs of the likes of Alexander McQueen, John Galliano and Donatella Versace, and why works by Van Gogh, Picasso and Warhol routinely sell for the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Far more than fabric and thread, paint and canvas, collectors eagerly buy into the inspiration. "Why should it be any different with jewelry?", asks Vivek Chaudhary, owner of the gallery vivekkevin (35 Dong Khoi, D1). "When you go to a normal jewelry store, you will see 99 percent of the jewelry sold is mass produced, or replicated. People will bring in a book or magazine and ask if this can be made. Or they have a stone that needs to be set. There's no innovation. Even people who are privileged want to feel secure, so when they wear something, it has to be a brand name. It may be beautiful, but it's mass produced. Where's the story behind it?"

Landing in Vietnam 10 years ago, Vivek transitioned from furniture design to jewelry design and along with late business partner, Kevin Lane, opened gallery vivekkevin in 2009. The small gallery is surprisingly stark, the only color provided by the eclectic collection of pendants, rings and brooches set out on display, surprisingly none under glass as if inviting physical interaction between viewer and pieces. A trio of colored hearts adorn the bare white walls, Vivek's own creations, beaten, burnished, enflamed and engorged using Mercedes Benz S-Class color coating technology. "It's conceptual and represents the complexity of human nature," explains Vivek of the highly glossed silver brooches finished in the car manufacturer's workshops. "When you're wearing them, others may see [their reflection] inside but only the wearer knows whether that person is inside their heart or not."

PASSION BEHIND IT

Another collection by Japanese artist Jiro Kamata features reflective circles of glass which are actually old camera lenses. "For each piece, there's a hidden story behind it," explains Vivek. "Somebody used it to shoot something throughout their life and now someone else is wearing it."

Works by Germany-based Vietnamese jewelry-artist Sam Tho Duong are also on display, taking on an organic, almost frozen quality, mimicking the bark and skin of branches, twigs and fruit covered in ice crystals, but made entirely of oxidized silver and tiny freshwater pearls, fused together with nylon string.

"A store is somewhere you buy a design. A gallery is where you buy a piece of art," clarifies Vivek of the notion that the worth of jewelry should be measured only in carats and ounces. "Some of these works have been bought by collectors all around the world and have been displayed in places like the Victoria & Albert Museum in London and the Museum of Arts and Design in New York. The artists I represent create either one of a kind pieces or limited collections, using very unique techniques and materials like recycled fabric, silver, zinc... But the jewelry I represent isn't about how expensive the material is or how big the stone is; it's about the technique and the inspiration. If you see a chair made by a designer, you think 'I can make that,' but you know, someone already made it. That's the thing. Someone had to come up with that idea."

The world of contemporary jewelry is slowly following in the footsteps of other, more established fields like fashion and art, where collectors gravitate towards individual designers instead of simply purchasing end products. Developing that level of admiration, though, comes with a cost. "Before a collector buys a work, they want to know the passion behind it, how it's made, how successful the artist is, which galleries represent him or her, which prestigious museums have shown them or bought their pieces. Sometimes it takes up to a year to sell one work to one person."

Being the first gallery space dedicated entirely to jewelry in the Asia Pacific region hasn't been easy, considering the long educational relationship that often develops between collector and gallery. "I still sometimes think, 'What am I doing?'," admits Vivek. "But this is my passion. I saw an opportunity in Saigon and thought that as the country changes, as the city changes, I could be part of the change, changing people's perception of art, culture and design. Initially, our clientele was expats, but now a big chunk are locals, maybe even more Vietnamese than expats. As they're learning more, they love the concept, the idea, the story, the technique. Still, it's difficult, but I wouldn't swap it for anything. This is what I love."

WHAT WOMEN WANT

A VIETNAMESE MAN WHO KNOWS WHAT LOOKS GOOD ON A WOMAN

TEXT BY MICHAEL ARNOLD

IMAGE BY ADAM ROBERT YOUNG

DESPITE WHAT HE may have you believe, Adrian Tuan's fashion designs are quintessentially Vietnamese. But they're just not Vietnamese in the way you'd expect – it's rare to see anything in his collections that even remotely resembles an ao dai. Famous for its body-hugging sensuality, Adrian's Valenciani (26 Ly Tu Trong, D1) brand womenswear – much like the lotus – blossoms gracefully from the impoverished Vietnamese soil.

"I think when you're growing up without a lot of means," he says, "you don't have any fashion around you, and the people you see are just trying to survive rather than look beautiful. My mom, for example, is so pretty, but she sometimes forgot that when we were growing up because she always had to try to make money for us. People like that who don't have any kind of fashion, you just want to give them something."

At 35, Adrian holds his own against younger designers for his acute sense of the prevailing trends and an uncanny understanding of what women want. His small team releases four collections per year, and there's not a lot of stock left over after each season. His drive to accentuate the beauty of a woman's body – and he's known for consciously catering to all sizes – has been methodical, studied, and passionate.

SEXY IN A DIFFERENT WAY

"When I started, I knew almost nothing about a woman's body," he admits. "The more you do it, the more you learn through all the cuttings, forms and fabrics you choose. With this business, because you're born a guy, you don't know about women and you have to learn. I don't sleep with women, so I can't learn that way, so I have to find another way to learn about them. Maybe there's a reason why so many designers are gay. You have to see women from a different angle. It's not sexual. I know how to make women feel sexy without showing too much breast, wearing short skirts. You don't need that to be sexy. That's what I mean when I say I know women."

"I look at straight international designers," he adds, "and they always do very, very revealing clothes. Speaking for myself, I think our brand is sexy in a different way – suggestive, through the way we use fabrics or the way we do the cut. It's not in-your-face kind of sexy."

With 80 percent of his clients repeat customers, Adrian has come to know the tastes of his niche market very well. "The women who wear my stuff are successful. They know what they want, so we don't need to give them any suggestions. We just give them the best of what they want. What I put out at the beginning was completely different to what I do now. At first they wanted something more sensual, more fitting. Now, they want something more comfortable that's easier to wear. I always have a little romance in my collections – the Valenciani brand is all about women who can love and are ready to give love. It's all about love. There's always some flair in there."

One of the key elements in the Valenciani design range is the plus-sized fit. "Over half of my clients are plus-size," he explains. "When you're sketching and doing the designs, you have to think about who's coming to the store, not just 'Oh, I have a good sketch.' Luckily when I started this brand, there were no Vietnamese designers doing ready-to-wear. They all wanted to get popular, so they did crazy business to get media attention. I didn't think about it that way. I think you need money to survive. You can't just be an artist and survive in this market. When you have 50 people under your paycheck, you need to have more responsibility, so you have to limit your creativity and do whatever is best for the brand."

"I've never wanted to do anything crazy, anyway," he says. "I just want to make women look beautiful, that's always been my goal. That's the key to my success – I know what they want and I give it to them."

VIETNAM'S RISE AS A GLOBAL FURNITURE DESIGN AND MANUFACTURING HOTSPOT

TEXT BY JAMES PHAM

IMAGES BY NGOC TRAN

AN UNLIKELY GAUGE to Vietnam's status as a global consumer can be found in its taste in furniture. While comedic author Jarod Kintz jokes that wooden furniture with no cushions is especially great when the in-laws come over as it discourages guests from staying too long, that type of unupholstered, heavily carved, highly ornate furniture has long been a status symbol for the country's middle- and upper-class. But as the Vietnamese acquired more wealth and had more dealings with the West, along came a change in taste, from highly traditional wooden furniture to highly embellished European antique reproductions, to "more clean lines, more flat surfaces, less decorative, more modern and streamlined from what it was 10 years ago," notes furniture industry veteran Randy Austin.

With more than 50 years experience in the furniture business, Randy, along with wife, Robin, are the owners of Austin Home Interiors (42 Nguyen Dang Giai, D2), an exquisite two-floor showroom featuring their own line of upholstered furniture as well as pieces from some of America's finest furniture companies, like John-Richard, Moore Councill and Emporium Home, all made in Vietnam.

Since opening in 2007, they've seen their customer base move from being predominantly expats to now more Vietnamese clients. "Expat customers are generally looking for a taste of home," says design manager McNeill Shiner. "Upholstery is really a tremendous deal, being able to customize a piece and get exactly what you want. To do that in the States, you're looking at least at another thousand dollars." The furniture and interior design store often catches expats "at the beginning or end of their journey. They've brought a container but houses here are huge. Or for people who are leaving, a month or two before they go, they'll want to fill up their container with investment quality pieces at incredibly reasonable prices," says McNeill.

On the other hand, "Vietnamese customers are by and large really just beginning the process of learning what they like, what they want and how to use their home to express all of that. Many Vietnamese clients come in with words they've heard like 'contemporary' or 'European' but may not have an idea of what that entails," she continues. "I encourage people to start by looking at Pinterest. Start with visuals and see what you react to. When you see something you really love, it's almost a visceral reaction. Forget about the terminology. Figure out what you actually like."

While the showroom is very eclectic with classic American furniture juxtaposed with modern, sleek styles, a little bit of Asian inspiration makes an appearance now and then, like in the Jim Thompson silk headboard with a lotus motif or in the oversized Buddha statues. "But we don't want to get too theme-y," says McNeill. "Just because you live in Asia doesn't mean everything you own has to have cranes or cherry blossoms."

While Vietnam is known for mass producing low end furniture, it's gaining a reputation as the place to manufacture high quality case goods. "Furniture manufacturing has just about died in the

US. Some is still done there and in China but not at the level of Vietnam," says Randy, who originally came to Vietnam as the president of leading American furniture company Theodore Alexander. "We came here because of the high skill level of the workers, their good work ethic and creativity. Maybe it's because of the French influence and the artistic creative nature of that era, but Vietnam excels in basic handwork, carving and crafts because they've done it for so many years. A lot of fancy stuff is done here now."

Randy now consults for major furniture companies, helping them find the right factories to produce their designs. Over time, Vietnamese craftsmen have mastered difficult techniques like antiquing and églomisé, gilding the backside of glass with gold or metal leaf.

"I've learned a lot about the work the craftsmen are capable of doing with their hands here. It's refreshing to any designer to not be restricted by the capabilities of the craftsmen; it allows them to think more broadly because of that. I tell people that in Vietnam, we can do anything. Don't close any doors. Think about what you want to accomplish and we can do it."

DON'T CLOSE ANY DOORS

For the studio's own line, the design team starts by collecting ideas from books, magazines and the internet, looking for interesting shapes and things that inspire. "Once we have ideas and photos pulled together, we'll figure out how to do it, how to tweak it. We'll then have a technical drawing made and then send it to production, one piece at a time, giving us a chance to really test it out," explains McNeill. While the line is sold locally, all the pieces are made to US specifications and quality standards and qualify for export.

A new Japanese whiskey bar & grill is home to some of the city's best Kobe beef

SET IN A PRETTY old manor just back from the main restaurant strip on leafy Han Thuyen, Monde (7 bis Han Thuyen, D1) has been the Japanese community's best-kept secret since quietly opening its doors last October. The venue is celebrity bartender Hasegawa Harumasa's first foray into Vietnam, styled after his flagship operation in Ginza's fashionable whiskey bar district in the heart of Tokyo. Back in Japan, Monde is a fairly distinguished brand that has survived for 30 years as the go-to for fine liquor and gourmet cuisine, and it would appear that Hasegawa's long-term strategy is to develop a similar establishment here – Monde Vietnam's top shelf collection of Western spirits and house-brewed sake is nothing short of extraordinary, and the restaurant's head chef is the noted Fukazawa Katsushi, straight from the kitchens of numerous five-star establishments in not only Japan but also France and Africa.

The menu is all Fukazawa's own design, and it's the chef's firm intention to confound expectations. Japanese with a European twist, Fukazawa's unique fusion dishes are a challenge to the profusion of similar Japanese restaurants in this city, and his dedication to the quality and freshness of the food is so intense that most ingredients – we're talking fish, meat and vegetables – are imported from Japan on a daily basis. You're welcome to try to get fresher genuine Japanese sashimi and exquisite Kobe beef anywhere in Saigon, but hopes aren't high.

The dining area is accessible via a steep staircase up from the ground-floor bar area, and it's comfortable – there are no sliding tatami doors or anything similarly pretentious; if anything, the décor does harken back to the plush classicism of 80s era corporate Japan. Our table was attended by Trang, the venue's local proprietress, who was most concerned about the proper matching of wines with our meal – she was on the nose with the 2012 Chablis Chardonnay, its dry, citrus tones pairing nicely with the fresh fish and caviar dishes.

The Food

We started light with safe, Western appetizers – soups and salads (ranging from VND85,000-145,000), all of which betrayed chef Fukazawa's French influences with their rich and milky textures. Our additional treat was the fresh Monde Okinawa pork dish (VND420,000), a generous chunk of cured ham flown fresh in from Okinawa itself – thankfully with none of the gristle of the sausage meats available locally.

We then moved further into Japanese territory with a number of seafood selections. While the sashimi platters were highly tempting (ranging from VND120,000-180,000, with occasional special hand-carried items priced at VND200,000-300,000), we opted for the caviar range. Our taramo fish roe salad

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP: Hakusai Cressar Salad, Cocktail, Monde Oyster Chowder,

The carving technique is Hasegawa's own invention, and the spheres are his polishing touch on what is now undoubtedly one of Saigon's most enigmatic high-class whiskey bar & grill venues (VND120,000) served with toasted French bread was almost juicy with its mash of pink caviar and potato, while the braised Japanese ayu with salt (VND200,000) is a rare dish indeed in these parts, but one well known to Japanese gourmands. Hasegawa hopes to introduce this delicacy to diners in Ho Chi Minh City; a sweet-fleshed fish found in Japan's Lake Biwa, packed with eggs when caught in the right season. Served baked with a sliced quince to squeeze over the caviar as you dine, this dish alone is reason enough to pay Monde a visit.

The ayu would have remained the most memorable dish of the evening were it not for the thin, succulent slices of Kobe beef (sirloin VND1 million/100g; thigh VND800,000/100g) served medium-rare on a platter somewhat resembling a serving of sashimi. If you've never had Kobe beef, you'll note the marked difference with what you're used to – widely regarded as the world's best beef, it's the prime cut from a variety of cattle found only in Japan, typically infused with light veins of natural oils that serve to tenderize the meat without pounding.

Take a tender slice and dip it in a saucer of specially-brewed Monde soy sauce and wasabi or mustard; this sheer delight of a dish is moist, sinuously fatty without a hint of greasiness, and is frankly what all beef would taste like if the world were at all fair. Again, the meat was nicely paired with a supple 2011 Californian Coppola Rosso, bringing a berry and mocha wash over the warm complexities of the beef and sauce.

A descent into the quiet blue-light bar area was rewarded by the earnest ministrations of veteran Monde head bartender Machii Tomoyuki. Serving with Monde Tokyo for a decade and now teaching staff here, Machii is serious and studied; he waves his hand over the lengthy cocktails list as if it's beneath him and says, "Just tell me what you like, I can make anything." We ask for something with citrus and something sweet & fruity respectively; he frowns, reaches behind him, and embarks on a whole performance of tumbler shaking – stopping only to smell and taste droplets of various liqueurs on his wrist.

The reward is a heady variation on a Jack Rose with French brandy, grenadine, apricot liqueur and lime juice on the one hand, and an Agua de Valencia on the other, the noted Spanish cocktail made with orange juice, champagne, vodka and gin. They're a very fine finish to the meal, and the Valencia in particular is noteworthy for its large, spectacular sphere of ice that sits neatly in the glass – hand-carved from an extremely dense 100 kg block of ice and designed not to melt through your drink. The carving technique is Hasegawa's own invention, and the spheres are his polishing touch on what is now undoubtedly one of Saigon's most enigmatic high-class whiskey bar & grill venues. ■

homemade goodness

TEXT BY JAMES PHAM
IMAGES PROVIDED BY LA BETTOLA

HEAD TO A bettola in Italy and you're likely to find a (sometimes literal) hole in the wall establishment, a family-run dive with mismatched water glasses and nary a menu to be seen, where the cook is also the waiter, busboy and maitre d', serving up whatever happens to be available in the back.

One of Saigon's newest eateries, La Bettola (84 Ho Tung Mau, D1), is facetiously named by chef-owner Giuseppe Amorello, an inside joke akin to calling a big guy "Tiny" or a redhead "Bluey". What this hip, tony restaurant does share with its namesake, though, is stripped down simplicity, from the clean, minimalist décor to the manageable menu celebrating beautiful products made on site.

Diners expecting red checkered tablecloths and framed photos of the Coliseum had better head elsewhere; this is not your nonna's kitchen. The ground floor houses a sleek (smoking permitted) bar, red leather chairs facing backlit shelving, ideal for showing off the satisfying selection of wines and spirits. We order the Aperol Spritz (VND105,000), common enough in Italy but a serendipitous find in Saigon considering how difficult it is to find Aperol. The citrusy sweet base for this cocktail is infused with bitter and sweet oranges, mixed with a healthy splash of Prosecco and seltzer. Aperitifs consumed, we make our way up to the twin dining rooms on the first floor, passing by the glass-walled kitchen, gleaming with new appliances.

To the eye, no expense has been spared to make this one of the city's most thoughtful spaces

The two non-smoking dining rooms, one dark and moody, the other bright and open, seat a total of about 80 guests. The sophisticated, ultramodern décor comes courtesy of Hanh Watt, the restaurant's business manager and benefactor. Her years of luxury hotel food and beverage experience come through in the trendy lounge music, the heavy cutlery and precision service of the wait staff. Upon renovation, a service elevator was installed precluding the mingling of guests and staff laden with trays and dirty dishes navigating the same staircase. To the eye, no expense has been spared to make this one of the city's most thoughtful spaces.

Comfort Food

The menu, however, is entirely the creation of chef Amorello, a native of Trieste, in the far northeast of Italy. Enrolled in cooking school at the age of 14 ("I don't like study, but I always have the passion to cook at home with my mama, so I choose this career," he says), chef Amorello has worked in Italian kitchens in Germany, Greece, Italy, the US and most recently in China. La Bettola is his first restaurant, though, and his ambitious menu shows he's out to prove himself.

Our dinner starts with the Rucola e Gamberi (VND135,000), a perfectly simple salad of arugula with generous-sized shrimp, homemade mozzarella and Gorgonzola. But the standout is definitely La Bettola (VND265,000), a huge serving (easily shared between 2-3 people) of shaved porchetta (slow-roasted, boneless pork stuffed with fresh rosemary and oregano, mustard and other spices) and paired with the most heavenly of focaccia — flaky, slightly crunchy and most importantly, straight from the wood-burning pizza oven downstairs, brushed with olive oil and garnished with a few sprigs of rosemary. If you've been to Central Italy, you'll recognize this most delicious of street foods. Here, instead of being a whole roasted pig, chef Amorello uses pork belly and garnishes the dish with cherry tomatoes and arugula, served without fuss on butcher paper laid atop a wood cutting board.

The mains are just as comforting, with tortellini, pappardelle, spaghetti and gnocchi being among the pastas made on site. We opt for the Ravioli di Magro (VND185,000), traditionally a favorite during Lent as it contains no meat. It's been said that the perfect mouthful of ravioli has a ratio of 45:45:10, dough to filling to sauce, and this comes close, with a spinach and homemade ricotta filling, lightly sautéed with butter and fresh sage.

The Filetto di manzo ai porcini (VND455,000) is equally solid, the thick cut of beef tenderloin featuring a good sear to seal in the juices, with the porcini mushroom sauce doing most of the work seasoning-wise, as it should.

By the time dessert comes around, even the promise of tiramisu made from homemade lady fingers and mascarpone can't tempt us. The lemon sorbetto (VND85,000), though, refreshingly sour with an appreciable kick of vodka, was the ideal palate cleanser.

While this brand new restaurant draws in the lunch crowd, being in the shadow of Bitexco and the rest of the financial district, evenings are less harried, if a relaxed dinner is what you're after. Whether chef Amorello and his team can continue to handmade as many products as he now does once word spreads of this superb dining experience remains to be seen. For now, though, the unique stripped down sophistication of La Bettola is a refreshing addition to Saigon's culinary scene. ■

STRETCHING OUT FROM across the vast desolate Gobi Desert in the south, through the seemingly endless grassy steppes of the central plateaus towards the magnificent snow capped peaks of the Altai Mountain range of the northwest, this is Mongolia, “The Land of the Blue Sky,” a land of extremes and contrasts. Although ranked as the 19th largest country in the world at about three times the size of Spain, Mongolia has the lowest population density on earth, with only 1.77 people per square kilometer.

Traditionally Mongolians have been pastoral nomads, living in small white round yurts, moving seasonally from one place to another as they pasture their herds. Today, about half of the population still practices this nomadic lifestyle. Independent, self-reliant and open-minded, Mongolians tend to be intensely curious about the world around them, with a deep connection to nature. Family, elders and traditions are highly valued in Mongolian society, and Mongolian hospitality is legendary.

Mongolians are fiercely proud of their connection to Genghis Khan, the 12th century founder of the Mongol empire. His cult status has surged dramatically in recent years with his name being used everywhere: on streets, squares, airports and even many commercial products such as vodka and beer. After landing at Genghis Khan international airport in Ulaanbaatar, many visit the statue of Genghis Khan in front of the parliament building located at Genghis Khan square in the city center.

Traveling in Mongolia is an adventure, with few highways or roads, so you must rely on GPS or your own navigational skills as you set off on your journey. Gazing into the horizon you can’t help but feel awed by the stunning beauty of the deep blue sky contrasted with the infinite emerald ocean of grass or the vast expanse of sand. ■

Become a Warrior King

Discovering the beauty of Ghana while volunteering

TEXT & IMAGES BY JONATHAN REBOURS

THE 4X4 TRUNDLES along the dirt path strewn with rocks, the odd shoe or tire lining the route underneath blossoming orange trees. Austere mud houses, primitive graffiti and obscure parliament benches where locals hang out and the obligatory spot where beer is sold - these symbols typify the community of northern Ghana - a red striped land of dusty fields devoid of moisture but blooming with possibility.

A UK government development project brought me and four other volunteers here to West Africa for three months. We witnessed the immense beauty of Africa, the debilitating poverty and the beneficial development work being done.

Situated between Cote d'Ivoire and Togo, Ghana (meaning "Warrior King") sits underneath the desert sands in Sub-Saharan Africa with a stretch of coast nicknamed "The Gold Coast" by the Portuguese. There are still remains of the colonial European forts and architecture dotted along the south coast, however Ghana, the first African nation to gain independence from colonial Britain, is a country very much standing on its own feet.

That is not to say it doesn't have its fair share of problems. It has two seasons, a rainy and a dry and most of the economy is based around agriculture during the wet season. Much of the population in the northern part of the country depend on the rain for their year-round livelihood, and if there is a poor harvest then that is simply tough luck. The poverty is noticeable everywhere you turn, from the state of the roads to the mud-built houses to the blind beggars defying the intense sun.

Yet, there are gems amongst the dust. Three hours from Tamale, capital of the Northern Region, is Mole National Park, the biggest nature reserve and safari park in Ghana. All around the central Mole Motel - a pleasant hotel enjoying monopoly inside the park - are acres of lush vegetation stretching to the horizon.

We took a private tro (minibus) there from Tamale. The guidebook warnings of a terrible road are unfounded - the two and a half hour trip was pleasant enough. On arrival elephants were bathing in the nearby watering hole and huge eagles were circling overhead. The hotel staff were helpful in organizing our tours and making our stay as comfortable as possible.

For roughly USD75 you can stay in a comfortable air-conditioned room, go on an open top jeep safari, convene with elephants, antelopes, baboons and many species of birds and enjoy Ghanaian and international dishes in the restaurant. The jeep safari takes roughly two hours and you are pretty much guaranteed to see one or more of the 400 or so African elephants that roam within the safety of the park. It has got to be the best value safari in Africa.

Working in Development

We were based in Bolgatanga, three hours north of Tamale, the capital of the Upper East Region where over 70 percent of the people were unemployed in 2010. Incomes in the Upper East are traditionally based in and around agriculture; however varying environmental factors mean that this is an increasingly unreliable source of money. TradeAID (www.tradeaidgh.org), the NGO who we were working with, seeks to address this by promoting alternative revenue streams by facilitating the trade of the local craftspeople - which includes anything from the basket weaving that Bolgatanga is so well known for to leather work and traditional 'smocks' - great woven garments worn usually for special occasions.

Working with smock makers, fabric and basket weavers and craftswomen with disabilities, it's easy to see the benefit of development projects in people's lives. In the couple of months we've been here, we've seen the profits of the craftswomen with disabilities grow week by week because of business planning and monitoring training we've introduced. The basket weaving groups working with TradeAID also enjoy 265 percent more profit compared with selling at local markets. Poverty reduction can be sustainable, and development organizations like TradeAID are making it happen.

Ancient Beliefs

An area 15km outside Bolgatanga steeped in ancient beliefs is Tongo Hills. A private taxi will make the return trip for about USD10 and even the journey itself is worth it as the rolling hills unfold over the dusty savannah.

The ancient shrine is the focal point of a trip to Tongo. Reminiscent of the vision of The Lion King, a ledge overlooks beautiful plains and the White Volta River far down below where the local community's spiritual shrine is positioned. It's a peaceful spot where everyone entering must remove their shirts - men and women alike.

Locals consult the shrine through the medium of a soothsayer, sacrificing varying sized animals based on the shrine's instruction and the gravity of the problem they're trying to solve.

The nearby Chief's Palace is a labyrinth containing his 18 wives and all their offspring, the mud walls adorned with bones of sacrifices to their ancestors. It's not unusual in these parts of Ghana for men to take multiple wives, but even locals in Bolgatanga laugh that the Tongo Chief's 18 is excessive!

A tour of the area and an invite into the Chiefs Palace will cost you a few dollars for a guide and although vegetarian tourists may be slightly uncomfortable with the remains of animal sacrifices strewn around, the people are accommodating and happy for you to snap photos.

Beach Break Musings

Although there is still much development work being undertaken, Ghana is one of the most developed of the West African nations in terms of political stability and wealth. The south of the country enjoys relative prosperity and has reduced unemployment figures drastically over the past 20 years. It is definitely a country moving forward and with increased tourism will continue to do so.

One such tourist destination is Busua Beach on the south coast, further east than its larger and more hectic counterpart, Cape Coast. Busua is an arching bay with one strip of five to 10 establishments and one tiny high street, a calming paradise set amongst the forests on the headland. It's reachable from the capital Accra by tro in a few hours or a gruelling 12 hours by bus from the northern region towns of Bolgatanga and Tamale.

The arduous journey from Bolgatanga was worth it as the water is warm and the tide barely changes, a topaz colored ocean under the African sun. Varying hotels range from a couple of basic beach huts where you may be woken by a monkey through the window to two comfortable hotels, all ranging from about USD4 per night to USD20.

Black Star Surf Club provides the entertainment with music blaring and monthly surf competitions for locals and tourists alike. In the interests of impartiality, tourists visiting Busua may be asked to officially judge the surf contest, being plied with beer for the service. They also organize bi-weekly jungle parties with guest DJs providing the soundtrack for the jungle clearing half a kilometre from the beach.

For those who want to enjoy peace and tranquillity, it's only a short walk down the deserted beach to find a quieter spot along the coast. You can explore the rocky headland and arrive at untouched coves, taking in the scenery while musing on the disparity of a country so seemingly divided.

While Ghana certainly doesn't evoke the images of commercials where starving children wither away, there is still an obvious need for development. The silver lining is that there is much being done, and not by huge organizations bearing down on Africans, telling them what to do.

The majority of the projects we encountered were organised by local people, building local enterprises to assist their communities. Take Samuel for example, a nurse at Afrikids Medical Centre who uses his income to fund his own orphanage. Or Nicholas, the Executive Director of TradeAID, who began his work with craftspeople in Bolgatanga over 14 years ago and is now one of the most revered men in the community.

Ghana is not a country in need of handouts. It's a place to be admired and cherished – with lessons to be learnt from the locals' laissez-faire attitude to life. Even with over 70 percent poverty in the Upper East the people are more than happy to go out of their way to help you, traversing vast markets to find the things on your list, chasing you half a kilometre through town to give you your change and the simple, constant smiles and shouts of "You are welcome!"

That is the overarching memory to be taken from the northern region – the wide smiles and giddy laughs. Even when times are hard it's all the more reason to smile, laugh and look to the sky. And that is why Ghana is definitely a country on the up. ■

On the Dock of the Bay

One man escapes frenetic Saigon to find serenity on a remote resort in Nha Trang

TEXT BY ROBERT STOCKDILL & IMAGES PROVIDED BY AN LAM VILLAS NINH VAN BAY

RECLINING IN A SPEEDBOAT looking back at the jetty I watch the two An Lam Villas Ninh Van Bay staff who greeted me at the mainland check-in facility waving to me. It's as if they represent the real world saying goodbye as I am whisked across the bay to the isolated resort which will be home for two short days.

Some 15 minutes later, more immaculately groomed, smiling staff are standing at the end of another jetty. The resort is built amidst enormous granite boulders and natural fauna, on the shores of Ninh Van Bay. Inaccessible by road, it is serenely beautiful, silent, relaxing and safe - everything Ho Chi Minh City is not.

From the moment the shuttle turned off the north-south highway onto a short, narrow road to the waterside check-in 16km north of Nha Trang, the pampering experience begins: refreshing towels, a welcoming Champagne or freshly squeezed juice and the obligatory paperwork, including a checklist of any personal dietary requirements or preferences, hints at any recreational activities I might wish to indulge in and how discreet I prefer my butler service.

Unfamiliar as I am with butler etiquette, given my distinctly commoner upbringing, I tick "discreet." Phu, who greets me at the pier and leads me to my first room, turns out to redefine the term.

The room is a Hill Rock Villa, with a peep of the bay. There's a double bathroom opening onto a private pool, long enough for these old bones to manage three strokes per length. There are indoor and outdoor showers and a bath resting before a large window overlooking a private garden.

Up a short flight of stairs is a lounge with a fully stocked wine cooler, a mini-bar fridge, espresso machine and twin sofas - yet open on all four sides so one feels part of the wilderness. More stairs lead to the bedroom, the only room air-conditioned (and the only one that needs it), with an enormous bed veiled in a flowing white mosquito net and an expansive deck for an in-room breakfast, overlooking the pool and the bush. Here, there is a satellite-connected TV for diehard city folk. (There is also free WiFi and good mobile phone reception throughout the resort, despite its remoteness).

An Lam Villas Ninh Van Bay is no cookie cutter Asian beach resort. The whole concept is based on respecting the ecological hinterland, celebrating Vietnam's food and culture, and service. There are 33 villas, their guests looked after by a 200-strong army of staff to ensure no one wants for anything after they set foot ashore.

Chief Operating Officer Antoine Sirot hopes guests experience Vietnam "in the architecture, our food and the music." You can take a class in understanding the origins of Vietnamese coffee and how to make a great cafe sua da. There are cooking classes, yoga lessons and the personal butlers will happily share with guests the country's culture and history.

The staff at An Lam are as memorable as the setting. Everywhere I went I was greeted genuinely by the team, no matter what their role. That, explains Sirot, is no accident. "Our staff are not trained like robots to do this and do that; they are guided. Their characters and personalities will shine through. We motivate the staff to make the guests happy, not make management happy."

As I enjoy an astonishingly delicious five-course Italian set dinner on my first night, that character shines through. Phu appears, like a friendly apparition from nowhere - he tends to do this the entire trip; I never see him arrive or disappear. He asks about my meal and I quiz him about what it's like working at the resort. Conversation comes freely and naturally.

The next morning while I soak in my private pool, I am acutely aware the only sounds are the chattering of geckos, invisible in the high ceilings, and tall bamboo trunks whispering in the breeze. I cannot hear or see any other guests. Butterflies of many colors dawdle by, skimming over the trembling water surface. I might as well be in the middle of paradise. Oh wait, I am.

Standing on Its Own

Later, after an hour-long trek through the bush to an enormous granite boulder from which you can see for miles across the island-dusted bay, and a subsequent 45 minute neck and shoulder massage in the onsite spa - I am taken to my next room, a Lagoon Villa. This is a larger, single story bungalow, with all of the same facilities as the other, but with a gorgeous deep bath carved from an enormous rock.

The villas all range in size from 80sqm to more than 150sqm. They were built around and into the existing terrain: on the hillside, no two are the same due to the bold rock formations in the hills behind the resort.

The resort is as self-sufficient as possible: it pipes its own water from natural springs in the hills, generates its own electricity, grows many of its own vegetables (the rest are farmed organically in Dalat), and even has its own lobster farm.

On rare occasions, trekkers might spot an endangered monkey with a white face and tail tip - a species now so rare it can only be found on this peninsula. But they're shy of humans and won't come too close. One morning, a mischievous squirrel augmented an avian dawn chorus outside my villa one morning. There are also blue headed salamanders, lizards, wild deer and pigs. But generally, wildlife is a rare sight.

Guests here typically stay seven or eight days on average, but the record is a German couple who, for three years running, have escaped the northern hemisphere winter for three months.

After two glorious nights' sleep, the largest, most filling dinners and breakfasts I can recall, endless smiles and fresh air I've not experienced in years, it's sadly time to go. As I sit on the back of the boat looking back at An Lam Villas Ninh Van Bay's jetty, eight staff stand and wave in unison, farewelling me back to the real world.

Pack Like a Pro - Part 1

The joys of traveling with only carry-on

Having visited nearly 60 countries as a travel writer and award-winning photographer, James Pham blogs about his adventures at FlyIcarusFly.com

I LOVE TRAVELING but hate packing. Isn't that how everyone feels? Before every major trip, I used to have those anxious moments of wondering what I'd forgotten, what I'm bringing that I'll probably never use and whether my hotel is going to have (fill in the blank) so I won't have to bring one. Over the years, though, I've gotten much better at packing to the point where it's more of a nuisance than anything else.

I recently talked to Ali Garland, author of the newly released e-book, Packing Made Simple: A Simple Guide to Packing Light (available on Amazon). Ali is an American expat living in Germany and shares travel tips at www.Travel-Made-Simple.com. Having visited all seven continents before her 30th birthday, she probably knows what she's talking about. While the book is aimed at novice travelers, there's something for everyone.

Carry-on vs Check in

Ali advocates for traveling light, taking carry-on only if at all possible. "It's cheaper, less stressful, lighter and faster," she writes. I'm definitely on board with carry-on only whenever possible. With legacy airlines going the way of budget airlines, checked baggage fees can be a substantial part of your travel costs. When weight isn't an issue, I love my wheeled backpacks (Lemoore Alpha by Tumi, VND 17.38 million at 4-6 Le Loi, D1) — easy to sling over my shoulder when roads are rough but great to wheel around on long walks to the gate. They also look more structured, which I like, meaning I won't feel out of place taking it with me to a business meeting or to a nice hotel. However, "it won't fit you as comfortably as a traditional backpack because it needs to be more structured. You'll have a harder, flatter surface against your back, so it will feel uncomfortable much quicker," Ali warns. "If you decide this is the type of carry-on bag you want, try on the bag as a backpack to see how it fits. Make sure you can't feel the handle or wheels digging into your back. Check how it functions as a wheeled bag to make sure you're comfortable with that as well."

Probably a more comfortable, if not stylish, choice are the larger outdoorsy backpacks. While you can definitely fit more in and they can take a pounding, I've never been a fan. Maybe it feels too much like you're carting around your whole life on your back. There's also the stigma that goes along with them. I asked Ali about her preferred carry-on luggage: "I'm sure some people do judge me for being a backpacker, after all there are a few awful backpackers out there who make the rest of us look bad. But I've never really experienced any hostility or anything like that. Most of the people I've encountered while traveling in Southeast Asia have been incredibly friendly, and even if they were wondering if I'd turn out to be some obnoxious backpacker, they never let that show. As for the backpack itself, many people were surprised at how small my bag actually was and how little I was carrying with me."

CARRY-ON ESSENTIALS

What to Pack in Your Carry-on

The simple answer is anything you wouldn't want lost, damaged or stolen. In addition to the obvious medication, identification, money, credit cards and electronics, Ali adds sentimental items, a change of clothes, entertainment, snacks and tissues. To this list, I'd like to add cords for your electronic devices. I've been fortunate in having only lost (more like delayed) luggage twice in all my travels, but the worst feeling is having all your devices but none of the chargers or cords for them. I was stranded in Barcelona for almost 24 hours with only my carry-on and the USD50 reimbursement for delayed baggage wouldn't have gone very far in buying a change of clothes and cords which may not even be covered under the airlines' definition of "essential items".

Traveling involves a lot of waiting: waiting at the airport (after some close calls, I always arrive extra early and either spend the time working or catching up on reading), as you're traveling on a plane or bus, waiting for traveling companions... So I definitely think 'entertainment' is a necessary carry-on item. With tablets now, you can have music, reading material, movies and the internet all in one place. When I'm about to go on a long trip, I start saving new episodes of my favorite TV shows, books that I've been wanting to read, even

When I'm about to go on a long trip, I start saving new episodes of my favorite TV shows, books that I've been wanting to read, even web pages (using read-it-later apps like Pocket or Instapaper) to my iPad web pages (using read-it-later apps like Pocket or Instapaper) to my iPad. With that, I actually look forward to wait times because I get to do some of my favorite things.

Managing Your Luggage in Transit

Chances are you're not the only one who's decided to go carry-on only. With increasing checked baggage fees, delays in retrieving luggage and the real possibility of loss, more and more people are choosing to bring (often oversized) bags onto planes. Ali recommends trying to board as early in the boarding process as you can to make sure you have room for your bag, especially if it's at the high end of the size limit.

Another great suggestion is to think ahead about which items you might want to use while in flight. Ali says "these should be packed in the bag that you put under the seat in front of you, that way they're easier to access... Trying to pull things out of your luggage once it's in the overhead compartment can be a big hassle. Sometimes (like during meals and turbulence) you won't even be able to get to the overhead compartment. You will have even less access to the overhead compartment if you have a window seat." I always carry a small tote bag in my carry-on (the laundry bags from nice hotels work well) to store just the things I'll need on the flight, including passport and pen for filling out forms and valuables (considering how much theft has been in the news recently by passengers on airlines serving Vietnam).

Stay tuned for next month's column when we'll talk about how to pack light with checked bags including the fold vs roll vs bundle wrap debate! ■

Masterpieces

Getting lacquered in Old Hoi An

A professional artist and author of A Week in Hoi An, Bridget March specializes in urban landscapes and aims to reveal the hidden treasures of city life and small town cultures through her illustrations. Bridget is currently offering art classes and sketching tours in Hoi An until the summer. For more of Bridget's work including news of her upcoming book visit brushwithasia.blogspot.com.

ILLUSTRATION BY BRIDGET MARCH

FOR THE PAST seven months, I have been painting and drawing in Hoi An. I have watched the change of seasons and witnessed the drama that major weather events bring to the lives of people who inhabit this peaceful corner of Vietnam. Since October a rice crop has been planted, filled the fields with fluorescent green and then turned to yellow ochre to be harvested under the baking sun of late April. The town that had been yellow and brown through the winter months is now splashed with vivid bougainvillea at every street corner.

The art galleries that line the streets also add splashes of bright color. The warm, contrasting tones and graphic images of the lacquer paintings beckon you into the brightly lit interiors to marvel at familiar images of Vietnam depicted on these almost irresistible shiny panels.

Lacquer painting was a mystery to me so I asked a local artist, Tran Huy Chien, to explain how to tell the difference between a cheap reproduction painting that may be imported from China, and an original work produced by a Vietnamese artist. He replied by inviting me to learn the art of lacquer painting at his studio. This was an invitation I could not resist.

I arrived, full of anticipation, at a sunny studio at his home in one of the quiet neighborhoods that characterize Hoi An. Chien had laid out a table with all the traditional tools a lacquer artist needs. There was a pre-prepared, charcoal gray lacquer board, a box of small chisels for carving the board, a wicker basket full of translucent shards of duck egg shells and a large clam shell lined with mother of pearl. Two tins of lacquer were positioned next to a sheet of thick plate glass where we would mix colors. On the shelf under the table were boxes, bowls and bags of raw powdered pigment: scarlet, ultramarine, magenta, violet, gamboges, viridian, cobalt and sienna to name only a few.

We transferred my design onto the board using chalk dust. Next, I carved out my first circle to create a shallow well into which I would inlay crushed egg shells on a bed of tacky lacquer. I was completely engrossed.

Over a period of two weeks I applied more egg shell, some mother of pearl, and layer upon layer of thin lacquer between slivers of reflective silver, gold and copper leaf. This layering enables light to move through the colors and adds a depth that is quite magical.

Between each coat, the lacquer must be left to cure in a humid environment (which, handily, is the normal atmospheric condition for Vietnam). After three or four days, more gold leaf and more coats of lacquer are applied. Finally the whole picture is ground down using stones and fine abrasive papers until the surface is smooth and different layers are revealed according to the artist's design.

My first lacquer board is a marvel of alchemy and artistry that has given me a real insight into this technique and now, I really can tell the difference between the cheaper lacquer paintings and the masterpieces.

My patient teacher, Tran Huy Chien is a graduate of the Hanoi University of Fine Arts and a member of the Vietnam Association of Fine Arts who owns Dang gallery in Hoi An. You can find out more about him and his classes at www.facebook.com/chien.huytran. ■

My life as... a pho cook

INTERVIEWED BY MAI NGUYEN, TRUONG MINH GIANG, CAROL NGUYEN, JOHN TRAN, DO THU HUONG IMAGE BY NGOC TRAN

MY NAME'S QUYEN, and I'm 22-years-old. I've been selling pho for five years now. This is a traditional family business. My dad started the restaurant, and now my brothers and I are helping him run it. We're from Dong Son Village, in Nam Dinh. Nam Dinh Province is known as the birthplace of pho, so that's why so many restaurants say they sell "traditional Nam Dinh beef pho." Almost the entire population of my village sells pho. You may come across people selling pho from other villages, or even from other provinces, but at least in Hanoi it's mainly people from Dong Son. When you're making pho, the most important thing is the broth. Before we can sell a single bowl of pho, we have to cook the broth for an entire day and night, so we have the fire burning and the broth boiling 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The broth you're eating right now had already been cooked for 24 hours before we poured it into that big serving pot over there to continue boiling. When a customer orders a bowl of pho, that's the broth we use. We use that broth the whole day, and if there's any left over at the end of the day, we dump it.

Nam Dinh beef pho is not much different compared to other pho. In the past, pho noodles from Nam Dinh had to be dried by hand, but we don't have to do it that way anymore. Now, people dry it by machine. The main difference is that it's part of a tradition that's been passed down from one generation to the next. Each pho shop has its own flavor; it's only when you eat it that you can tell the difference.

Selling pho is a funny thing. Sometimes, we run out of pho in the middle of the day; other times, there's still plenty left at the end of the day. Even on a day when there's plenty of broth left over, we throw it away; we have to. I know some pho shops put their broth from the day before in the refrigerator to use again, but I can guarantee that no Nam Dinh pho shop would ever do that. Every day is the same: I work from dawn to dusk. My only time off is at Tet; that's when I go back to my hometown on the 30th and come back to work in Hanoi on the third day of the New Year. On other holidays, like Independence Day, I still have to work while other people get their day off. But I'm used to it. Once in a while, one of my friends asks me to hang out in the afternoon when we've got fewer customers; other times my brothers and I switch shifts for each other. My family may work for the rest of our lives, but I can't imagine us ever buying our own house in Hanoi.

I don't have enough passion to pursue school. And if I do end up going to school, there won't be enough hands to help out in the shop, so we'll have to hire someone else. It's complicated

Enough to Eat

My family didn't open a shop in our hometown because people in Nam Dinh don't have enough money to afford pho. So six years ago, my dad and my brother came to Hanoi, rented this house, and opened the shop. I came here one year after they did. I live in the shop. I'm the youngest; my oldest brother doesn't live here so usually it's only my other brother and me. Every day is the same, looking at the streets of Hanoi; it's the same. I guess it's because I'm used to it. This shop is my dad's, I just help him. Business isn't growing much. To tell you the truth, life here is only a little better than life back home in the village. The price for one bowl of pho keeps going up because the price of everything else keeps going up. Six years ago, we rented this house for VND6 million, and now the rent is VND12 million. That's just in six years! And aside from rent, we also have to pay tax: VND300,000 each month. We don't make much profit; it's only enough to eat.

And as for me, I don't actually get a monthly salary because I'm working for the family, you know? If I ever decide to do anything else later, I'll ask my family: if they have money they'll give it to me, if they don't, then I'll just have to accept it. I'm not sure what my future will be like, but if there's an opportunity, I might change my job. If not, then I guess at some point I'll have to break away from the family and open up my own pho shop. Before this, I was studying in the village high school but I had trouble keeping up. And anyway, my family didn't have the resources for me to continue school, so I quit and came to Hanoi to sell pho.

To tell you the truth, I want to become a car mechanic. Ever since I was a kid I've always played with cars, and back home in Dong Son I would sometimes practice fixing cars. I don't really like selling pho, I like working on cars better. I told my parents about my dream several times but I know it's not easy. Going to school and getting training costs money, and I'd have to ask my parents for it. And as you can see, we don't make much money selling pho, so I don't feel comfortable asking them for money. Sometimes at dinner my parents will say, "It's up to you, if you want, you should go to school," but I keep thinking about it and it just doesn't feel right. I don't have enough passion to pursue school. And if I do end up going to school, there won't be enough hands to help out in the shop, so we'll have to hire someone else. It's complicated.

Question Everything

Making sure schools have the right answers

Adrian Watts is the Deputy Headmaster and Director of Academic Studies at the International School of Ho Chi Minh City (ISHCMC)

THE SCHOOL YEAR has ended and as parents you are either reflecting upon the year at your present school or preparing to move to a new posting in another country. Selecting a school for your family is one of the most important, yet difficult, decisions that you will make. This decision is made more difficult because you are often moving to unknown territory; have to make judgments under pressure of time and without significant data and information that is completely trustworthy. Of course, there are a number of reasons for choosing a school and every family has a different set of priorities. However, I have tried to identify a few areas of a school's function and some related questions that as parents you could ask to gain a deeper understanding of the institution that you are entrusting with your child's education.

Teachers

First and foremost, a school must have highly effective teachers and this ingredient is far more important than any other factor. Researchers have slowly come to realize that a school's effect on learning is nowhere near as significant as an individual teacher's impact on learning, that an effective teacher brings value-added learning gains for years to come and that an ineffective teacher will have the reverse effect. Research has recently suggested that many teachers learn most and improve the most in their first few years of teaching and after that, learning either plateaus or stops. This is generally because schools do not focus enough upon creating a continuous professional learning environment through targeted professional development opportunities: teacher goal setting and providing time and expertise for coaching of teachers in their classrooms. The old proverb, "don't judge a book by its cover," is very applicable when choosing a school; a ramshackle school with good teachers should always be preferable to a school with wonderful facilities and ineffective teachers.

Questions to ask: How do you select your teachers? What standards do you use to evaluate teacher performance? How do you help your teachers' professional growth? Do you use professional coaches to help your teachers develop their teaching skills?

Clear Definition of Learning

Most schools will tell you they are good or great and refer to the organizational bestseller Good to Great by Jim Collins.

For schools to move from good to great, the emphasis has to be clearly focused around learning. Today many international schools dazzle prospective parents with new technologies, 1:1 computer programs, state-of-the-art facilities, activities, uniform design, jazzy websites and so on. Some of these aspects are important but they are all peripheral to the highest priority for you as a parent, that is your child's learning and how will you and the school know that your child has learned. If a school has defined learning and can explain what it regards as its learning principles then you have a set of criteria to refer to when you are observing and discussing your child's progress as a learner. By making learning the key focus of the school it tells you a lot about where the energies of the teachers and administration at the school are going.

Questions to ask: Does your school have a definition of learning? Has your school defined its key learning principles? Do all teachers understand the importance of assessment for learning rather than assessment of learning?

Teaching Pedagogy of the School

For many of us adults, our schooling focused on the learning of content and knowledge. Today the focus should be on learning how to use skills that access, interpret and create from the content and knowledge that is so freely available from the worldwide web. It is important that schools place a strong emphasis on students building enduring understandings through a constructivist approach built on clearly defined sets of skills that are embedded in subjects and reinforced through and across the curriculum from KG to Grade 12. By ensuring this systematic approach, students will be able to transfer learning to different learning scenarios which will prepare them to be problem solvers for the rest of their lives. Today the most relevant curricula are driven by concepts not content.

Questions to ask: Does your school have a prevalent teaching pedagogy/methodology that it encourages the teachers to follow? Do you have curricula that develop and encourage the concepts and skills that will be important for 21st century citizens?

Mission and Vision

Remember that when you are choosing a school for your children, the school's mission is their promise of what you will get from enrolling in that school. The vision is what they aspire to be or do with your children. Many schools have very fancy and complex missions and visions that promise they will create perfect global citizens who will change the world, but the question as a parent has to always be: How will I see that in my child? Does the school truly walk the talk with its mission and vision or are they just words on a website? When you are walking around the school, is the mission clearly visible? A school that has a review cycle for its mission and vision is one that is willing to reflect, discuss and accept change as a normal part of the development process of the school. In our rapidly changing world, modern schools have to be forward looking if they are going to serve their stakeholders effectively.

The old proverb, “don’t judge a book by its cover,” is very applicable when choosing a school; a ramshackle school with good teachers should always be preferable to a school with wonderful facilities and ineffective teachers

Questions to ask: Does your school have a Mission and Vision and how will that affect my child as a learner? Does the school use its Mission and Vision as a filter for decisions that are made? Does your school adhere to its Mission? When was the school's Mission and Vision last reviewed?

Educational Decision Makers

Unless the administrators who run the school are regularly in classrooms, they do not know what they are talking about. Imagine a sports coach who never attended games. At school, what happens daily in classrooms is the most important work and the decision makers need to be where the action is, to understand the learning going on, to see the challenges that students and teachers face, and to build meaningful relationships.

Question to ask: Is it normal for the school's decision makers to visit classrooms?

Voice of Stakeholders

Many schools believe that the educators are always right and that parents and students simply do not understand what is best. Today this is a misguided belief for a school and particularly so at international schools where we have a highly educated parent community that has enormous experience of what works elsewhere. You want a school where parents are seen as partners in the education process. Students are also very astute about what works and what doesn't. So it is important that schools provide opportunities to listen to its stakeholders. Schools should be making good use of accrediting agencies that encourage honest self-reflection and provide good critical friendship advice from visiting experts. As parents, you should be looking for a school that is open and honest, does not spend all its time telling you how good it was, but instead focuses on how it is moving forward and improving its services.

Questions to ask: Do parents and students have a voice at the school? Is there a parent teacher organization? Is there an annual parent satisfaction survey? Are there student governance opportunities available throughout the school? Is the school accredited? ■

IMAGE BY NGOC TRAN

Dear Hadrien,

Last week, a friend of mine threw a party for her boyfriend's birthday and with copious bottles of wine we surely had a lot of fun, but at some point I noticed that a few other foreigners were taking soft drugs. Coming from Europe, I was not too shocked, but once in a while you hear those horror stories about foreigners getting caught with drugs abroad. As I don't want to get in any trouble, could you please enlighten me with some legal information about drugs in Vietnam?

A member of the Paris Bar, Hadrien Wolff has been practicing law in Vietnam for more than seven years, currently as a partner of Audier & Partners based at its HCMC office. Having gained extensive legal experience in the Netherlands and Cambodia, Marijn Sprokhereef is an associate at the Hanoi office of the same firm. Audier & Partners is an international law firm with presence in Vietnam, Myanmar and Mongolia, providing advice to foreign investors on a broad range of legal issues.

YOU ARE RIGHT to be concerned and unfortunately, I am also aware of the horror stories that you are referring to. A Midnight Express kind of nightmare...

Even though in some countries in Europe the legal regime for soft drugs is quite liberal, in many Southeast Asian countries, including Vietnam, it certainly is not. Therefore, it is good to know a bit about the laws in Vietnam and our starting point is the Vietnamese Penal Code of 1999.

The Penal Code contains a separate chapter about so-called "narcotics-related crimes," which includes, among other things, the growing and producing, the storing, transporting and trading, the organizing and facilitating, and the illegal use of narcotics itself. For your better understanding, "narcotics" are defined as addictive and/or psychoactive substances, such as cannabis, heroin and cocaine.

Vietnamese law prescribes that those who illegally use narcotics in any form will be sent to a compulsory rehabilitation facility first. Those who continue to illegally use narcotics will be sentenced to between three months and two years of imprisonment, whereas repeat offenders shall be sentenced to between two and five years of imprisonment.

For other narcotics-related crimes, the sentences vary. For example, you will not be held criminally liable when stockpiling, trafficking or appropriating a limited amount of narcotics, such as opium, cannabis or cocaine resin of less than one gram and heroin or cocaine of less than 0.1 gram. Because it is not regarded as significantly dangerous to society, such actions will only be sanctioned with a fine ranging between VND1 million and VND 2 million.

I suspect that these are not the horror stories that you heard of, am I right?

In fact the Penal Code prescribes for much more severe sanctions in case of so-called "aggravating factors," such as the number of times a person has committed the crime and the volume of narcotics involved. For example, illegally producing narcotics will carry a sentence between two and seven years of imprisonment. When such crime is repeatedly committed, it will increase to between seven and 15 years, and persons convicted of producing the narcotics in a professional manner shall be sentenced to a jail term of between 15 and 20 years. For several other narcotics-related crimes, such as the illegal stockpiling, transporting and trading of heroin and cocaine weighing more than 100 grams, the Vietnamese Penal Code prescribes life imprisonment and even capital punishment! That should be a good enough reason, if you need a legal one, to prefer wine over narcotics at future parties!

As a concluding remark, the Vietnamese Penal Code applies to Vietnamese citizens and foreigners equally, as long as the criminal act is committed within the territory of Vietnam. If you ever end up in a situation like that, you may be "reassured" that your embassy or consulate may send a representative to visit you in order to help you inform your family and to find you a lawyer to protect your legal rights. In addition to that, if your home country has signed a relevant agreement with Vietnam, you may be transferred to your home country and serve your sentence there.

But if you want my advice..., just make sure you will never let it come that far!

Every month, Hadrien and Marijn answer legal questions from Oi readers. If you have any legal questions you want answered, send them to legal@oivietnam.com. ■

From Here to There

Traveling in uber style

Anh Minh-Do is the editor at TechInAsia.com for Vietnam, focusing on technology startups, trends and companies. Minh is on the board of Starthub.vn - a database and forum for startups dedicated to the growth of Vietnam's business ecosystem.

MOST PEOPLE IN Vietnam never thought it would happen, but it has – the Uber app has arrived. The luxury transportation startup that connects users with a driver at the tap of a smartphone screen debuted in Bangkok in February, Beijing in April, and Jakarta in June. This month it reached Ho Chi Minh City and is on track to roll out in major cities across Asia. Uber's presence here is interesting because the city is already dominated by two major taxi companies: Mai Linh and Vinasun. In the past 10 years, the two companies have flooded the city with their recognizable green taxis and logos and reliable services, beating out their smaller competitors. Uber will face resistance from these two incumbents whose drivers are increasingly using two of Uber's competitors: GrabTaxi and EasyTaxi apps. Although the numbers cannot be verified definitively, some in the startup ecosystem believe that GrabTaxi is doing better than EasyTaxi because it is offering a better discount and marketing strategy across Vietnam's two major cities – Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City.

Either way both will now have to contend with Uber's unique marketing techniques. As Uber's press release outlines, it playfully partnered with Vietnamese celebrities for the extra boost on the day of the launch: actresses Hong Anh and Chi Pu, singer Hoang Thuy Linh, and blogger Nicky Khanh Ngoc were the first to jump at the chance to try Uber out for a ride on the town. They downloaded the Uber app, and within 10 minutes, a luxurious Uber was able to whisk them away to a movie set, a recording studio, and a photo shoot. We'll let you figure out who went where.

We're likely to see more of these marketing ploys, just like how Uber offered lion dances in China and Singapore for Lunar New Year. What does Uber's potential market look like? The USD17 billion company has expanded to over 100 countries worldwide, but the bulk of its revenue comes from just five cities. In other words, Uber is clearly playing a very long-term game. It wants to get a foothold before copycats get too powerful. It has a long road ahead though. Uber will face pushback from local taxi companies as well as encounter cultural challenges. Cities like Ho Chi Minh have a peculiar luxury car culture. Most luxury black cars of the BMW and Mercedes variety are owned by the wealthy and upper middle class. They own the cars but hire the drivers so the car owners may not allow their drivers to moonlight on the side. Yet Vietnam sorely needs logistical support, and Uber can help. Companies like Giao Hang Nhanh have already grown to fill the holes, and Lazada, The Gioi Di Dong, Tiki.vn, and others have invested heavily on their own logistics fleets. If Uber founder Travis Kalanik's vision is to really bring Uber into other logistics categories like ice-cream delivery and flowers, the Vietnamese will welcome them with open arms. Ho Chi Minh City and Ha Noi, both lack a train system despite desperately needing one. Uber, GrabTaxi and Easy Taxi are all easing that burden for now. ■
